Dear Louisa:

After waiting so long to reply to your letter, I should have more accurate information to give you, but for a few dates I'm writing the nephews for confirmation. I will begin by reminiscences of my own, which are rather sketchy.

I know that Jonathan had a necklace made for sister from the amethysts which he had had polished and finished. I also have a small piece of the rough stone which is supposed to be amethyst, but actually shows very little sign of any brilliance!

But as to his thinking there was any value in the amethyst ledge, I doubt it.

Before I ever knew him, I knew two of the Steere aunts, or rather the three; Aunt Rachel used to attend Yearly Meeting regularly, back in the Newport days; She was a New England old maid type, straight in her spare figure and also in her attitudes. Aunt Rachel had been married but I think had no children, and she did not come to Yearly Meeting that I remember. Aunt Phebe lived much longer and I knew her well; her son was a favorite cousin of Jonathan's, was a banker in the town of out towards Worcester. Sister inherited several things which the aunts had treasured, pincushions, and such like, and loved sister because she treasured their things and showed them to friends. They also (that is the family) had lovely old furniture, one uncle for whom Jonathan was named having been a cabinet-maker. My father used to avoid the chairs in sister's living room lest they let him down! Both boys divided these when their father died.

The farm property grew by the many additions Jonathan made, till there are more than 400 acres, located on both sides of the main road, and the old barn used to be on that side of the road, till it caught fire one day from a passing auto tossing a cigarette stub! Then Jonathan had the new barn put up and rented to a man who carried on a dairy, with fancy cows and Grade "A" milk, etc. But he never would fix up the house and sister had to make do with old-style outhouses, no water in the house, a wood-burning stove, etc. But she really did not mind and liked getting away from Haverford to the country peace and quiet.

Ruth Place
Robert, Job's youngest son, had and still has a good farm in Chepachet, used to raise turkeys, but then got a government post recently and moved to Worcester, always intending to move back to the farm when he retires, which won't be long now. Ruth married a man with a good job in a Harrisville mill, now retired, and they live where they always did on the edge of Chepachet town. I have not been there since Jonathan's funeral in 1958. Jonathan sent the two older boys to Haverford, Walter lives out West, Tom died, and Ruth and Robert I've explained. When their mother died they were taken by her relatives in Chepachet and brought up very well, as in those days Jonathan was not married and could help out only later by looking after some of the education. Robert would not go to Haverford, so went to Amherst Agricultural, and I think looked after his own affairs, a very self-sufficient and capable young man. Ruth went to Moses Brown & then art school, I think.

Job's children were Walter, Thomas, Ruth, and Robert, and were very young when their mother died, not long after their father's death in 1907. The date I do not have in mind exactly.

I recall the farm well, the Battey brook, as it was called, but no one ever showed the amethyst location or made anything of that!

This is terribly mixed up and I doubt you can make head or tail of it.

My only interest in quartz and gems came from the fact that we have three very nice paper weights, one clear glass (so-called), one brown, and one a lovely blue. The grandnephews love them and I've promised to keep them for them. I found exact pictures of the types in a book I have by Verrill, "Minerals, Metals, Gems", and I used to think my paperweights were just manufactured in those shapes, but now I judge they are polished up from original quartz in those shapes. The clear one we have always had, so it is older than I am; the blue one came from George's home, the brown one, too, I believe. One has so many sides I can hardly count them. But that isn't my speciality.

Maybe this is enough and too much for now. My memory is getting a bit spotty.

Much love to you both.
